TRIMET UNITES 200 YEARS OF INDUSTRY COMPETENCE LOCATIONS WITH LONG TRADITIONS IN METAL PROCESSING

Where sophisticated aluminium die castings for the automotive, electrical, and mechanical engineering industries are manufactured today, a metal goods factory started up production in 1817. TRIMET's Sömmerda location looks back on nearly 200 years of expertise in manufacturing innovative metal products. In 1907, the aluminium smelter in Saint-Jean-de-Maurienne was a pioneer in industrial metal extraction using fused-salt electrolysis. It subsequently set technological standards in aluminium production.

The historical developments of TRIMET's production plants are as varied as the application areas for aluminium. This experience, gained from the entire aluminium industry value chain, coupled with the customer focus, adaptability, and innovative spirit of a family-owned company, is the engine for our successful development.

FROM INTERIOR OUTFITTER TO ENGINE BUILDER

TRIMET HARZGERODE: MORE THAN 140 YEARS OF EXPERIENCE

Along with the Sömmerda location, the production plant in Harzgerode is the heart of TRIMET's Automotive Division. Some 650 employees and more than 40 trainees provide automotive manufacturers and suppliers with sophisticated pressure and gravity die-casting products made of aluminium. The foundry, which has Europe's most advanced gravity die-casting facility, manufactures a variety of different products, ranging from engine blocks and clutch and transmission housings to control and valve plates. Customized materials are developed in the adjoining smelting laboratory. And the smelting and recycling plant supplies the foundry and its partners from the automotive industry with liquid metal from the recyclable resources process.

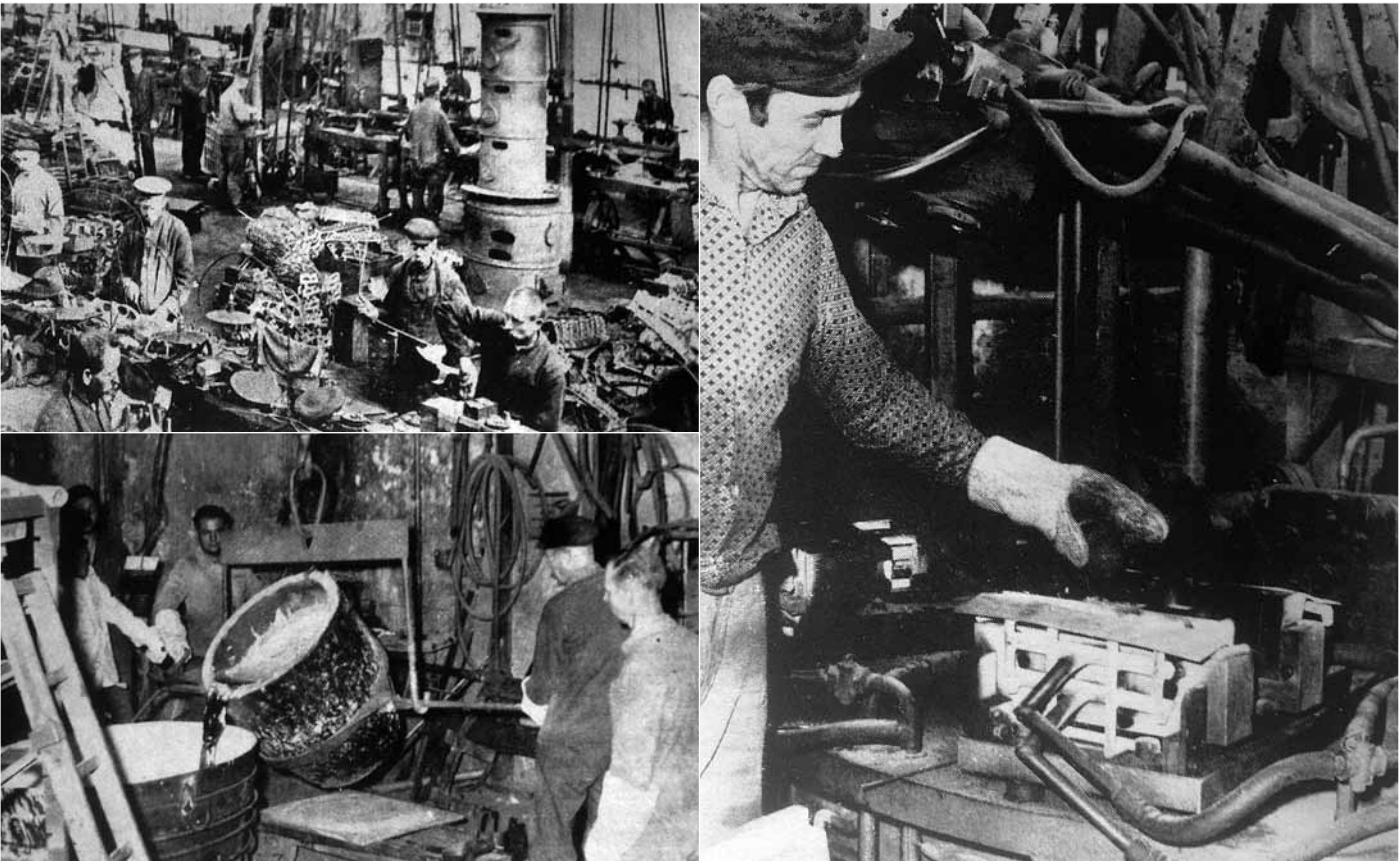

The Harzgerode production plant has been part of the TRIMET family since 2001. However, its history goes back more than 140 years. It was founded in 1873 as "Eisenwerke L. Meyer jun. Co. Aktiengesellschaft" – and even then, it drew on centuries of experience in metal processing.

Metal processing follows mining

Metal processing in Harzgerode and its environs originated in ore mining. The Harz area is Europe's oldest mining region. The earliest traces of mining date back to the Bronze Age, 3,000 years ago. In the third century, metal ores were extracted in the Harz region through surface mining before being smelted. Mining experienced its first heyday at the time of the Ottonian and Salian emperors in the tenth and eleventh centuries. In his Saxon Chronicle, the monk Widukind of Corvey reported in the year 968 that Emperor Otto was tapping the Harz Mountains for ore veins. Otto and his successors made the Harz foreland the center and starting point of their empire. Silver mining formed the basis of its economy. Mining and processing silver, copper, and iron ores shaped not only the economy, but also the early phase of industrialization in the Harz region, which became a center of attraction in the world of science, technology, and inventions. Alfred Nobel conducted explosive experiments with dynamite in the Harz region. The Mining Superintendent Julius Albert developed wire rope in Clausthal. And James Watt, the inventor of the steam engine, traveled to the Harz area in search of inspiration. Even Goethe's famous Harz Journey in Winter sprang from an "unpoetic" source. As a minister in Weimar, the poet was also responsible for mining in the duchy, and traveled to the Harz region to gain information on the state of the art.

The monument of a "young engineer" was erected in 1931 to celebrate the 75th anniversary of VDI in Alexisbad. After World War II, the statue was first placed in storage, before coming to Düsseldorf in 1981 on the occasion of the association's 150th anniversary. Today, it stands in the courtyard of VDI's main office in Düsseldorf.

Ore was also mined in the immediate vicinity of Harzgerode. Mining was first officially mentioned in a document dating back to 1300. Otto I, Prince of Anhalt-Aschersleben, granted three monasteries in the region the right to mine for ore. After ore mining had come to a virtual standstill in the late Middle Ages, the rulers of the 16th century provided incentives for its revival. The right to mine was proclaimed in 1538 in Harzgerode. This enabled entrepreneurs to mine for mineral resources, even if they didn't own the land on which the mine was operated.

Why VDI was founded in Harzgerode

A century later, enterprises of the metallurgic sector were established in Harzgerode, and have continued their work right up to the present day. In 1693, a silver smelting works was inaugurated. It gave what was to become the town of Harzgerode its name and was run up until 1909. The ironworks founded by Frederick, Prince of Anhalt-Bernburg-Harzgerode, in 1646, in today's district of Mägdesprung proved to be more durable and, above all, influential. "Mägdesprung bar iron" manufactured here was a highly sought-after product in the 18th century, used for the production of horseshoes and cart wheels, among other things.

In the 19th century, the ironworks was expanded with a machine factory as well as a workshop for manufacturing special metal-working machinery. The head of the ironworks, Carl Bischof, was a pioneer of metal casting technology. He made a name for himself in the professional world with groundbreaking scientific research and inventions in furnace technology. Bischof was also an honorary member of a student association that sought the input of engineers and practitioners. Thus, the idea of founding an engineering association came into being. Bischof suggested Alexisbad, now a Harzgerode district, as the location for the inaugural meeting. There, the Association of German Engineers (VDI) was founded on May 12, 1856. Today, VDI is the largest engineering association in the world, with more than 150,000 members.

Carl Bischof's machine factory also impressed Lipmann Meyer, who traded in sheet metal goods in Harzgerode at the time. In 1873, Meyer founded "Eisenwerke L. Meyer jun. Co. Aktiengesellschaft" and had a cupola furnace built – the origin of TRIMET's Harzgerode plant today. The company initially produced art castings for domestic use, for items such as chandeliers, table lamps, and hanging lamps. The business environment was favorable, with steadily rising demand during the Wilhelminian period after the Franco-German War of 1870–71.

A new chapter in the history of metal processing

The situation changed after the First World War. The plant could only bridge the inflationary period of the early 1920s with a debt guarantee from the city and fresh capital from a Berlin banker. By changing production to turntables – gramophones

Milestones in the industrial history of the Harzgerode region

1300: Prince Otto I grants mining rights to three monasteries in the region – the first documented evidence of mining in Harzgerode

1538: Right to mine proclaimed to revitalize the local mining

1646: Construction of an ironworks in Selketal – the origin of Mägdesprung district

1693: Founding of a silver smelting works, which lent its name to the current district

1856: Founding of the Association of German Engineers in Alexisbad

1873: Founding of the "Eisenwerk L. Meyer jun. & Co.," the origin of TRIMET's Harzgerode plant today

1936: Founding of the "Mitteldeutsche Leichtmetallwerke"

1960: The plants in Sömmerda and Harzgerode are consolidated into the "VEB Druckguss- und Kolbenwerke," becoming the key piston manufacturer of the GDR

1993: Privatization of the formerly state-owned operation

2001: TRIMET takes over the plants in Harzgerode and Sömmerda were enjoying a rapid rise in popularity – and gas cookers, the factory was able to turn things around. By 1929, the factory employed 500 people. But then the Great Depression brought production to a standstill for a time. When demand picked up again, the Nazis were already in power. The regime was quick to recognize the value of the Harzgerode ironworks – especially for its armament plans. Production was gradually converted to light metals, especially aluminium and magnesium alloys for aircraft production. In the 1930s, a factory was opened in Harzgerode-Schlossberg, as well as what was later to become Plant I.

After the war, production was interrupted. Much of the equipment had either been destroyed or dismantled. “VEB Harzer Spritzgusswerk” restarted operations in 1946 with what were initially 28 employees. By 1949, the number of employees had grown to 87.

CHRONICLE 2013/14

When looking back at the past financial year, we must of course include the highlights that often had an effect on the company long after they had finished.

Let us look back at investments and new products as well as at social and societal activities that accompanied our commercial success during the reporting period.
